Bodies of the Negroes, After Death Were Hacked to Pieces With Knives and Set on Fire—Sent to the Mines for Dynamite to Aid Them in Work.

(By Associated Press.)

DANVILLE, ILL., July 25.—This city is in the throes of a race war. One negro, named J. D. Mayfield, from Evansville, Ind., who to-night shot and killed Henry Gatterman, white, has already been lynched by a mob of men. The mob were clamoring for the life of another negro named James Wilson, who has confessed to a brutal assault on an Alvon, Ill., woman, just north of here. After lynching the negro, the mob proceeded on to the county jail. The officers tried to save the second negro by some ruse. Wilson, it is charged, went to the farm house while the woman was alone, and told her he was hungry. While she was getting him something to eat he entered the kitchen door and seized her. He fled, leaving her half dead. Afterward she managed to crawl to the nearest farm house, where she told her story. A posse of officers started in pursuit of the negro, and when Wilson was captured he was hurried to the county jail to prevent lynching. There the negro confessed. Three other negroes have been attacked by members of the mob and severely beaten. One of them is named Ben Rich and the other two are said to be refugees from Evansville, Ind. Some negroes are arming themselves and others are preparing for flight.

Burned Body.

The mob changed its mind before attacking the jail and went back and cut down Mayfield's body. They rushed it to the public square and burned it in a bonfire, hacking it to pieces with knives as it burned.

Then they charged the jail and the sheriff's deputies fired, wounding several members of the mob, some fatally. Among the wounded are Adam Merry, fatally shot through the head; H. Hines, shot in the neck and shoulder; and Otto Heineke, shot in the arm, will recover.

The mob repulsed, sent to a neighboring mining camp for dynamite and probably will attack the jail again. The mob is infuriated and threatens to lynch the sheriff and his deputies, also the negro turnkey in the jail.

After securing battering rams, it took the mob about half an hour to wreck the city prison, the negro being found half broken. The mob, who had taken the safe, broke the door, knocked down, jumped upon and stamped to death. A rope was placed around his neck and his lifeless body was dragged through three blocks. An effort was made to hang the body to a telegraph pole, but this time numbered 5,000, then dragged the body to the jail and burned it.

Company K, a colored troop, has its quarters here, and the officials have ordered that it be kept out. Leaders of the mob declare they will try to kill the entire company if it comes out.

GRAND JURY INTERRUPTED AND CLOSES INQUIRY

(By Associated Press.)

JACKSON, KY., July 25.—The grand jury adjourned this afternoon without returning any additional indictments. The jury was out for about an hour. The jury was asked to take a vote on one of the few cases, ex-Senator Alex. Hargis rushed into the jury-room and demanded that Riley Collins, who had testified against the alleged assassin of Town Marshal Cockrell, be indicted for perjury, and that this interruption caused the jury to close its investigation.

They are securing large tracts of forest land in northern California and Oregon through their agents, who have been for some time quietly buying property on the coast. With the land holdings which Harriman and many others may count on, it is said that the plan is to merge the more valuable lands controlled by the Hill roads and the Southern

FEW STONES THROWN; BUT THE NIGHT QUIET

THE SLUMP CAUGHT HIM

Mr. Wyndham Bolling Found to Be Involved.

HE HAS DISAPPEARED

Absent from the City Since Wednesday and No Tidings of His Whereabouts—His Affairs Placed in Receiver's Hands.

There were no startling developments in the street railway strike situation yesterday, and the throwing of stones at night on the suburban lines and the explosion of a few torpedoes upon the track at several points were about the only reminders that a strike was in existence. No one was injured, so far as reported, by any of the missiles. There was perhaps more stone throwing in the suburbs of Manchester beyond the city limits and on the Fairmount and Clay Street lines than elsewhere. Motormen on the Forest Hill line report several fusillades of stones, and in one case the conductor had to do some dodging to avoid being struck, the missiles being so numerous that there was danger of being knocked out.

The company yesterday took the precautions to establish patrols of armed men in the vicinity of the suburban tracks, and the effect of this surveillance was to decrease serious attacks on the cars and operatives. Up to a late hour last night no injury and no damage to rolling stock had been reported.

The patronage of the cars still grows, and even at night is very good, the explosions under the cars on Thursday night not having deterred people from riding. There was a large crowd at the Reservoir yesterday afternoon and last night a considerable crowd went out to this cool spot beside the waters. With the exception of the few minor disorders reported at night the cars are now operated without interference of any sort, and less is heard of the strike and of the boycott than ever before.

Despite rumors to the contrary, the health of the street railway employees in barracks at the Reservoir continues excellent, none of the men being ill.

Two More Strikers Return.

The company yesterday received and accepted applications for employment from two of its former employees, one of whom is Mr. John Archer, of Manchester, a veteran street railway operative, who has been confined to the lines in that city for years. Mr. Archer was superintendent of the old Manchester horse car line. Three other applications were received and accepted from new men, all of whom are experienced. Thus only about twenty-five or thirty vacancies exist in the full complement of men necessary for the full operation of the lines. The men are now nearly all uniformed, and are fast familiarizing themselves with the names of the streets and the routine of duties.

To Open Hollywood Loop.

At the offices of the Passenger and over Company at the Reservoir last night it was stated that the Hollywood Traction line via First Street and the loop would probably be opened to-day. Despite anonymous reports as to the opening of the line, no real trouble is anticipated. The company has plenty of men to man the cars, and will put its best men in charge.

From the standpoint of the strikers there is nothing new to report. The men yesterday received strike benefits, but

Remains of Dead Pontiff are Placed in Stone Sarcophagus Until Such Time as Tomb Shall Be Erected in Basilica of St. John Lateran.

(By Associated Press.)

ROME, July 25.—The body of Pope Leo XIII. was interred in St. Peter's to-night. The stroke of the hammer which resounded through the immense dome of the cathedral announced to the earnest gathering in the nave that Leo XIII. had been laid to rest. At sundown the most important and most solemn of all the obsequies took place. The front doors of the basilica were closed, and the vast church, except for a row of lights at the shrine of St. Peter, the candles about the bier and those persons who had quietly and with the utmost reverence gathered there, appeared deserted.

About 1,000 persons had received invitations to attend the ceremonies. The cardinals, who met earlier in the Vatican, entered the chapel choir waiting there for the arrival of the procession. Cardinal Gregorio, the camerlengo, holding the keys of command.

Cardinal Rampolla, as arch priest of the Basilica, was waiting outside the gates, in violet robes, surrounded by the chapter of the cathedral, which was led by Monsignor Ceppatelli, who conducted the service. Monsignor Ceppatelli directed the work of the removal of the light, which was executed by eight soldiers, or Pope's carriers, attired in their brilliant red brocade costumes. They at first tried to raise the bier, but, finding it too heavy, they slowly slid it onto a car with noiseless wheels.

The Miserere.

Then to the strains of the "Miserere," which wailed through the lofty church, and preceded by a glittering cross held aloft, the procession, carrying candles and torches, slowly left the chapel and went up the church, passing the bronze statue and beyond the shrine of St. Peter. Those gathered fell to their knees.

After slow progress around the church the cardinals arrived at the chapel choir, the bier being so carried that the dead Pope entered head first according to the ceremonial, the chapel from semi-obscure flashing into the brilliancy of the suddenly turned on electric lights.

There were no more invitations, the doors were closed, and the obsequies were stopped, remaining in the main part of the Basilica behind a double line of the Swiss guards, in their peculiar yellow, red and black uniforms, and armed with halberds and serpentine swords. Within the choir, where Count Camillo Pecci, a nephew of the Pope, wearing the red uniform of a general of the noble guard.

In the chapel the music changed to notes of joy and triumph, and rang out with telling effect. From the outside the five bells of St. Peter's rang their accustomed salute to the coming night, mingling harmoniously with the music of the choir.

Impressive Scene.

The scene in the chapel was most remarkably effective. The altar, which was placed in the center, backed by an altar, with a beautiful image of the Madonna, before which were burning four immense candles of silver wax.

Behind the two sides of the chapel in the choir seats were thirty-six cardinals, all wearing violet robes except Cardinals Gotti and Pierotti, who wore the white vestments of the papal chamberlain. Cardinal Vives y Tuto in Franciscan brown.

The body was sprinkled with holy water, and the foot of Leo XIII. was kissed for the last time by Major Domo Cagliano, Master of the Chamber Bissetti and Count Camillo Pecci.

The Major Domo then laid the white shroud, bordered with gold. Over this the Prefect of Ceremonies spread a larger silk veil, which covered the whole person. Fire was lighted in a brazier, and the ceiling, while Monsignor Bartoloni read for twenty minutes the oratio brevis, eulogizing the dead Pontiff, and Notary Poponi, eighty-four years old, read out the burial record, a service which he performed upon the occasion of the death of Pope Gregory XVI. and Pope Pius IX.

The Monsignors of the Basilica, added by the Noble Guard, then laid all that was mortal of Leo XIII. in a cypress coffin, lined with red satin, and bearing on the cover and lid crosses, the entire sacred college and Prince Colonna rising to their feet as a last tribute and sign of respect. When the body had been carefully put in the coffin it was entirely concealed with the red velvet covering, while the choir sang on the bier.

When all had been arranged, the supreme prayer was said and the last benediction given, all present joining. Half suppressed sobs were heard on all sides.

Song and Prayer.

The sad duties of sealing the coffin were softened and soothed by the sweetness of the singing choir and the prayers of the clergy.

When the last supreme moment came the heavy coffins, weighing in all 1,122 pounds, were rolled out of the chapel preceded by mace-bearers singing as they went and followed by all the cardinals, among whom the bowed figure of Gregorio, the strong, upright Vannutelli brothers, the white-haired Agliardi and the immense black-browed Scavapa were the most conspicuous. Pulleys were attached to the coffin and soon, to the strains of the
